Six Flags Produces Motion Pictures

Koala bears won't be the only newcomers to the motion picture this April when Astroworld's parent company Six Flags, Inc. premieres their first comedy spoof, BARNABY AND ME, in Houston and across the nation.

As their initial film for distribution, BARNABY AND ME, a G-rated family comedy starring Sid Caesar and Juliet Mill centers around a loveable koala bear who enchants audiences as the cynical observer of Caesar's shyster-like antics. The story stretches from Sydney, Australia and culminates in an adventuresome safari in search of mysterious treasure.

Committed to broadening Six Flags position in the family entertainment field, Bruce C. Juell, chairman of Six Flags, Inc., and president of Great Southwest Corporation states, "for over a decade, we've been providing quality family entertainment to millions of Americans through our theme park industry.

BARNABY AND ME, a joint venture between Six Flags, Inc. and Trans-Atlantic Enterprises, Inc., is produced by Matthew Herman and directed by Norman Panama from James Hernerson's original screenplay.
